Position: Associate/Full Professor of Higher Education Finance

Salary: Commensurate With Experience

Summary:
Rutgers Graduate School of Education is part of New Jersey’s flagship public university. Committed to advancing excellence and equity in education, the Graduate School of Education (GSE) at Rutgers University-New Brunswick seeks an outstanding scholar to join the school and Rutgers Ph.D. in Higher Education program faculty. We seek a tenure-track or tenured faculty colleague whose research focuses on higher education, higher-education finance, and advancing issues of diversity, access, and social justice in education and society.

Qualifications:

Minimum Education and Experience

Applicants are required to have earned a doctoral degree from a major research university in Higher Education, Economics, Public Administration, Sociology, or another closely related field. In screening applicants, we will be looking for evidence of demonstrated commitment to addressing diversity, equity, and social justice issues in education/higher education; scholarly accomplishment; commitment to a strong, productive, and externally funded research program; prior successful experience advising dissertation students, effective teaching at the master’s and doctoral levels, experience and commitment to high-quality online teaching and a publication record that includes articles in higher-education journals. Our School and University are especially interested in applications from individuals who are members of groups that have been and still are underrepresented in university faculty positions. Salary and rank will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Qualifications at senior levels include, in addition to those above, a record of programmatic research that is nationally or internationally prominent, success at garnering external funding, effective mentorship of doctoral students, and commitment to participate in faculty governance. We are especially interested in researchers who can collaborate with current program faculty and complement their research and teaching interests.

Overview:

The new Ph.D. in Higher Education program at Rutgers University will admit its first class of students in September 2016. This interdisciplinary degree program brings together distinguished higher-education scholars representing a variety of disciplines and academic units across Rutgers. Core faculty members include higher education experts in the fields of, for example: education, psychology, law, communication, organizational studies, public policy, history, and economics. Although the Ph.D. in Higher Education program is administratively located in the Graduate School of Education; faculty from other schools across Rutgers participate actively in teaching and advising students. These schools include the Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy, the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Communication and Information, the School of Environmental and Biological Sciences, and the School of Management and Labor Relations.

The Ph.D. in Higher Education has three signature areas of expertise which are represented in the coursework and research that students will complete:

- Diversity and Inclusion: higher-education equity and access, faculty and student demographics, institutional diversity, outreach, recruitment, admissions and retention
- Organizational Dynamics: leadership, accountability, finance, governance, partnerships and workforce development
- Student Learning and Development: assessment of student learning, postsecondary learning and teaching, student development, teaching and learning via digital technologies, college and workforce outcomes

Statement:

Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey

Chartered in 1766, Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, is the eighth-oldest institution of higher learning in the United States. It has a unique history: from its inception as a colonial liberal arts college, Rutgers grew to become the land-grant college of New Jersey in 1864, and to assume full university status in 1924.

Legislative acts of 1945 and 1956 designated it the State University of New Jersey. The integration of the University of Medicine and Dentistry with Rutgers, became operational on July 1, 2013.

Today, Rutgers is one of the leading public research universities in the nation. With nearly 65,000 students and over 24,400 faculty and staff on its three campuses in Camden, Newark, and New Brunswick, Rutgers is a vibrant academic community committed to the highest standards of teaching, research, and service. Dr. Robert Barchi became Rutgers 20th President on September 1, 2012.

With 33 schools and colleges, Rutgers offers over 100 undergraduate majors and more than 200 graduate and professional degree programs. The university graduated more than 16,400 students in May 2015, and has more than 470,000 living alumni residing in all 50 states and on six continents. Rutgers also sponsors community initiatives in all 21 New Jersey counties. University wide, new degree programs, research endeavors, and community outreach are in development to meet the demands of the 21st century.

Rutgers University is an affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer and a NSF ADVANCE Institution.
All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability or protected veteran status. Rutgers University is an EO employer – M/F/Veteran/Disability
