ED.M. PROGRAM IN SPECIAL EDUCATION
SEQUENCE FOR TEACHER OF STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES
Leading to NJ Teacher of Students with Disabilities Certification

I. PROGRAM DESCRIPTION: The master’s degree program in special education provides advanced graduate preparation for general education teachers seeking Teacher of Students with Disabilities licensure. NJDOE requires a Standard Instructional Certificate or Certificate of Eligibility with Advanced Standing (CEAS) in a subject area other than English as a Second Language to issue a TOSD certification. Therefore this program is only available to applicants who hold an instructional certificate other than ESL.

Course work addresses the instructional needs of students with mild and moderate disabilities. The 36-credit program is composed of a special education core (21 credits); a learning, cognition, and development (LCD) requirement (3 credits); educational statistics, measurement, and evaluation courses (6 credits); and special education electives (6 credits).

This special education core develops competencies in the assessment and remediation of students with learning disabilities, collaborative teaching/consultation skills, and knowledge about New Jersey special education law.

Students not interested in pursuing a master’s degree but interested in obtaining the Teaching Students with Disabilities endorsement should apply for admission into the 21 credit non-degree program. A student working on the non-degree program who later decides to be in the master’s degree program must seek admission to the degree program prior to completing 12 applicable credits.

II. APPLICATION DEADLINES:
Fall admission - February 1 deadline
Spring admission - October 15 deadline
