Rutgers University welcomes students with disabilities into all of the University's educational programs. In order to receive consideration for reasonable accommodations, a student with a disability must contact the appropriate disability services office at the campus where you are officially enrolled, participate in an intake interview, and provide documentations: hhttps://ods.rutgers.edu/students/documentation-guidelines. If the documentation supports your request for reasonable accommodations, your campus's disability services office will provide you with a Letter of Accommodations. Please share this letter with your instructors and discuss the accommodations with them as early in your courses as possible. To begin this process, please complete the Registration form on the ODS web site at: https://webapps.rutgers.edu/student-ods/forms/registration

Course Description

Learning goals:

Students will:

- Develop an understanding of leadership, psychosocial and identity development theories and how these theories apply to contemporary student-athletes
- Identify common student-athlete welfare and identity struggles that may impact academic and athletic success during college
- Increase awareness of human diversity, cultures, values and beliefs pertaining to the student-athlete experience
- Develop an understanding of the influence student-athletes have on campus culture, and therefore the importance of social responsibility and civic engagement
- Develop an understanding of how athletic engagement, campus engagement, civic engagement and personal values relate to identity development
- Enhance personal leadership skillsets

Course catalog description:

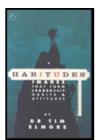

This course will introduce leadership, educational psychosocial and identity development theories pertaining to college student development. Students will apply theory to case studies and assignments pertaining to two distinct identity spheres: student and athlete. This course will enable students to understand the complex identities of the contemporary student-athlete and equip students with theoretical underpinnings to apply to their own personal college success and education.

Other description of course purposes, context, methods, etc.:

The pace of the course will be rapid, but students are expected to read and study all assigned readings before the specified class period, noting questions, and issues to discuss in class. Course content will be covered with a variety of differentiated instruction methods: lecture, guest lecturers, discussion, critiques, group work, simulations, and student presentations. Students should ask the instructor immediately if they have questions at any time on assignments or expectations.
